Chapter 1 by Jhagadeswara rao Rajavarapu

Hi, have you ever played Minecraft? Well, it might be easy for you, but for a villager, it is a very hard. For example, we have to tend the farms, trade, make the houses, and we are in danger of dying or turning into zombie villagers every night. Well, you players might help us a bit, but what about when you're not there. This is how we villagers live.

I see villagers running to their houses, and I know what's happening, zombies. I quickly hide in my house, scared because I know they can break doors. After a long time of hiding, the sun comes up. I run outside to see what destruction has occurred. Everyone is in mourning, 3 of the 6 priests have died, and 2 blacksmiths are zombie villagers. A tear runs across my pixelated cheek.

I was hiding nearby when I heard the news as it spread to one of the few blacksmiths we have left. A wither was coming. I knew that something had to be done, so I snuck in and took some ingots and armour and weapons from his chest.

I also then stole from the now undead blacksmiths, and made some more armour and weapons. I was gonna prepare the others to fight this wither together, as if there was no player nearby... We would be doomed without armour and weapons on hand.

The problem is, how do I convince them it'll help, maybe that blacksmith could help...

Chapter 3 by Lynne Miller

then Steve saved us he had shiny diamond armor and a shiny diamond. another priest died. I think his name was bob or something, AH YEAH BOBBY.

I found this star thing and Steve stole it I brought out a pig, but no ordinary pig, my pig was wearing a diamond helmet and had a diamond sword, he killed Steve.

I took the star and put it on trade for 36765745586395747 emeralds. I was guessing it was super cool by the fact it was shining.
